Theme - Revitalizing Research - Innovations in Methodology: Date -14th, 15th & 16th Feb 2019

Introduction	The three-day workshop from 14th-16th February 2019 on "Revitalizing Research - Innovations in Methodology" is specifically for law students, aiming to enhance their research skills and methodological understanding. Research methodology forms the foundation of legal research, influencing the rigor and credibility of legal research outcomes. Therefore, the workshop focused on introducing innovative approaches and techniques to revitalise research practices among law students.
Objective	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Gain a comprehensive understanding of contemporary research methodologies relevant to legal scholarship. 2. Explore innovative approaches to legal research design, including doctrinal, empirical, and interdisciplinary methodologies. 3. Develop advanced skills in legal research techniques, including case analysis, legislative analysis, and comparative legal research. 4. Enhance proficiency in legal writing, citation methods, and scholarly communication, ensuring clarity, coherence, and persuasiveness of research outputs.
Outcomes	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Enhanced understanding of advanced research methodologies and their applications in legal research. 2. Proficiency in applying innovative research design techniques to address complex legal issues and challenges. 3. Improved skills in legal research techniques, including case analysis, statutory interpretation, and legal database searching. 4. Increased ability to critically evaluate legal sources, arguments, and precedents, facilitating nuanced and evidence-based legal analysis.

Key Issues Addressed	<ol style="list-style-type: none">1. Legal Research Design Innovation: Participants explored innovative approaches to legal research design, including doctrinal, comparative, and empirical methodologies. Key issues addressed included formulating research questions, selecting research methods, and ensuring methodological rigor in legal research.2. Legal Data Collection Techniques: The workshop covered a range of legal data collection techniques, including case law analysis, legislative analysis, and legal database searching. Participants learned to navigate legal databases effectively, extract relevant sources, and analyse precedents.3. Legal Writing and Scholarly Communication: Hands-on sessions were conducted on legal writing and scholarly communication, focusing on clarity, coherence, and persuasiveness in legal argumentation. Participants practised drafting legal memos, case briefs, and research papers, incorporating proper citation methods, and scholarly conventions.4. Interdisciplinary Perspectives: The workshop encouraged multidisciplinary dialogue and collaboration, enabling law students to integrate insights from other disciplines into their legal research. Participants explored multidisciplinary research opportunities and learned to apply sociology, economics, and political science insights to legal analysis.
